The 1971 convention is almost here. Elsewhere in this issue you will see the tentative conference program and biographical sketches of conference speakers.

Since the conference, in theory, deals with public relations, a suggested theme might be: "Get what? - at the Library." If there are any other suggestions, pass them on to me before September 10. If not, the suggested theme goes. Of course, I think many of you are like me: A conference really doesn't need a theme; only the active interest and participation of the conferees.

The membership meeting should prove interesting. Be prepared to think deeply about and to discuss the future WVLA. Think in terms of bettering the association's service to its members; think in terms of a viable association and ways to make it more effective. The executive board and other committees will have specific recommendations to make. Be prepared for intelligent action, criticism, and program relative to those recommendations.

Participation is the key to the success of the 1971 convention - your participation. I have been glad to serve you and this association during the past year. Your chance to serve will come during your participation in the 1971 convention.

Banners proclaiming "Welcome to the Library Book Fair", gaily decorated ways, a carnival like atmosphere with "peep shows", puppet making under the "big top" and a staff in costumes of their grandmothers the 1971 summer program of the Cabell County Public Library. Tired of summer reading clubs and related it was decided that this year, in honor of the library's Centennial, the librarians celebrate with the theme "Spending a Summer at the Library Book Fair".

Although most heavily emphasizing services to children, the theme is supported by the entire library system - department and branch giving its interpretation to the fair.

June 21 the fair officially opened with a pair of folk singers performing at the main library. This program was enthusiastically received by everyone. Originally the two performances had been arranged according to the wishes of the younger children committee for the first show and the teen-agers for the second; however, the audience for the first show returned almost 100% for the second performance. The folk singers are college students - will tour the state later in the summer. Newspaper and television covered the opening of the fair.

Open bins, decorated and placed so that the youngest to the oldest patron can "rummage" for books of the fair. They contain interesting selections and have proved an excellent method of getting sometimes unused books into the proper hands.

There are "listening corners" with records and tapes, "peep shows", strip viewing, a television film, street watchers and of course a summer reading club - this time supervised by five clowns who advise you to "read under the big top" and to join the "book fair fun club".

June 21 the fair officially opened with a pair of folk singers performing at the main library. This program was enthusiastically received by everyone. Originally the two performances had been arranged according to the younger children committee's first show and the teen-agers' second; however, the audience for the first show returned almost 100% for the second performance. The folk college students - will tour the fair later in the summer. Newspapers and television covered the opening fair.

Open bins, decorated and sized so that the youngest to the patron can "rummage" for books of the fair. They contain interesting collections and have proved an effective method of getting sometimes unused books into the proper hands.

There are "listening corners" with records and tapes, "peep shows", strip viewing, a television film, Street watchers and of course a summer reading club - this time over by five clowns who advise "read under the big top" and for the "book fair fun club".
